

Follow-up of villagers stepping on the wind turbine blades

When he had earned the confidence of his fellow villagers, they helped him dig a borehole for a deep well. Once constructed, it not only brought water and consistent irrigation to the village but...

Kamkwamba went on to build other windmills--for generating electricity and pumping water--in his village. News of Kamkwamba's success spread, first appearing in The Daily Times, a newspaper in ...

Transporting two wind turbine blades through Ararat on Tuesday, February 18, created more public interest than usual.

On October 15, some netizens photographed five people dressed as tourists stepping on a wind turbine blade and swinging like a seesaw on a hillside at the Huanghualiang Wind Farm in Baoding, Hebei Province.

Villagers were woken by a 300ft wind turbine crashing down on a Welsh mountainside - after it was blown over during storms which brought 50mph winds. The £20million turbine - double the height of ...

But after a turbine blade broke off the coast of Nantucket, the future of wind power in the US is in the hands of the island's lifelong residents, wealthy seasonal tourists, and...

Khaled, a curious boy, stands on a hill, fascinated by the wind turbines spinning in the breeze. He learns from a friendly villager that these turbines generate electricity for their village.

The laughter ended when he hooked up his windmill to a thin copper wire, a car battery and a light bulb for each room of the family's main house. The family soon started enjoying the trappings of modern life: a radio and, ...

They lived and breathed the wind, their days spent maintaining the delicate balance of the wind turbines, ensuring that the power of the air was converted into energy that fueled the village.

The windmill at the Kamkwamba family compound, a few brick buildings perched on a hill overlooking the village, has turned it into a stop for the curious: People trekking across Malawi's arid plains drop by. Villagers now ...

Follow-up of villagers stepping on the wind turbine blades

Web: <https://www.kopbeenskloof.co.za>

