

The lazy style of the middle hair dryer

What are cute lazy hairstyles?

Cute lazy hairstyles are all about making the most out of minimal effort while still looking put together. Whether you're working with second-day curls, a fresh wash, or in-between styles, the key is finding quick looks that work with your natural texture and require little to no heat or excessive product.

Which hair dryer is best for curly hair?

Diffusers are ideal for curly hair as they reduce frizz, define curls, and add volume by gently circulating air to the hair ends. Concentrators focus the hair dryer's airflow for smooth, sleek styles. Broad, extended nozzles dry thick, long hair faster, while short, narrow ones help tame curly or frizzy hair for a sleek blowout.

Are all hair dryers the same?

For optimal results, "you need maximum power with the best airflow, all in a lightweight design," adds Michelle Cleveland, owner of Hair Addict Salon in Toms River, New Jersey. Over their long history of testing hair dryers, GH Beauty Lab scientists have found that all models are definitely not created equal.

Should you use a hair dryer?

They, along with our hairstylist pros, agree: choosing the right tool is essential for any heat styling needs. "The best hair dryers offer faster drying times, reduce frizz, and [promote] better hair health," says Cynthia Alvarez, a celebrity hairstylist in Los Angeles and New York.
